COMMAND BRIEF

Command a Force accountable to you.

You answer for everything that happens on your property. You deserve a security operation that answers to you — one system, one contract, one team that owns the outcome.

01 THE PROBLEM

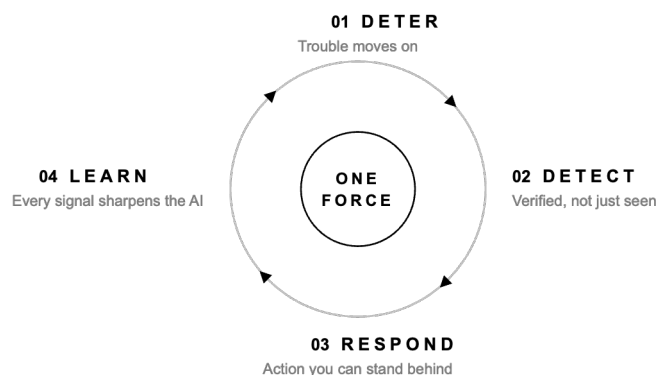

You were sold half of a security program, and you have been wiring in the other half yourself. Guards from one vendor. Cameras from another. Monitoring from a third — each with someone else to point to when something goes wrong. Every false alarm and every 3 a.m. judgment call lands on one desk: yours.

Cameras see everything and decide nothing.

People carry judgment and cannot be everywhere.

02 YOUR GUIDE — ONE FORCE, ONE LOOP

We built the Force for people who answer for outcomes: machines, software, and licensed agents united under one escalation path and one chain of command. It runs as a loop, not a checklist — and the loop closes.

Deter. Autonomous patrol, audio, lighting, towers, licensed agents on post — a presence trouble routes around.

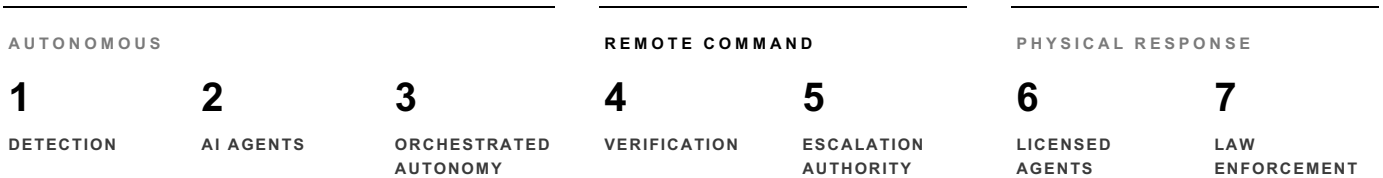

Detect. Multi-modal sensing fused with AI analytics, verified by a remote command team against a digital twin of the site.

Respond. Talk-down, dispatch, agents on the ground — logged, timestamped, auditable, and exportable.

Learn. Every machine, human, and incident adds data; every signal sharpens the AI. The Force compounds.

03 THE COMMAND STRUCTURE — ASF-7

7 levels, 3 layers, 1 Force. An accountable human holds escalation authority at every level, every hour of every day.

04 YOUR PLAN — THREE STEPS

- 1
Book a briefing. Tell us what you are accountable for, by location. No demo, no pitch. Just us learning so we can provide sound advice.
- 2
We architect the Force. Machines, sensing, remote command, and licensed agents per site — shown in a digital twin before anything ships.
- 3
The Force takes the watch. One contract, one command layer, one accountable entity — and incident reports stop landing on your desk unresolved.

05 THE STAKES

KEEP THE PATCHWORK

A gap nobody owned. An incident nobody saw coming. A report with no clean answer — and your name on it. Costs out of control.

COMMAND A FORCE

One contract, one escalation path, one audit trail. The weight stops landing on you — it lands on us.
